Manager Commentary

After January's positive sentiment credit markets turned slightly negative in February. Euro area high yield corporate bond index fell almost 3%, also emerging market bond indices dropped. At the same time the risk premium of the investment grade bonds, which we have preferred in recent months, continued to decrease. Large positions in this asset class led to the 0.3% increase of fund's NAV.

At the beginning of the month we continued to decrease our positions in Central and Eastern European countries' local currency bonds. At the same time we think that interesting investment opportunities are emerging in EU new member countries Euro denominated government bonds. Some of them offer already more than 10% expected annual return. We continue to gradually increase the positions taken at the end of February in those bonds.
