Manager Commentary

Swedbank Pension Fund K1 returned 0.2% in February with YTD performance of 0.2%. Although February started rather negatively for bond markets due to temporary relief of the situation in North Africa and due to rising developed markets' equities, sentiment changed in the middle of the month and bond markets ended the month in slightly positive territory. Flow of economic data for euro zone and US indicated that economic growth is becoming sustainable. Thereby Germany's business climate index (IFO) rose to highest level of its 20-year history. On the other hand inflation is rising at faster pace than expected. Conjointly price of crude oil has reached record heights. Within euro fixed income it was relatively quiet month. German government bonds yield curve little changed in both long (-4 bp) and short bonds (+1 bp). Meanwhile risk premiums of euro periphery bonds (Greece, Ireland, Portugal) continued to rise. Euro zone governments pursued intensive negotiations on dealing with the debt crisis and a new stimulus package should be revealed in next EU leaders summit in March. Most exciting event in February was resignation of ECB's potential new president Alex Weber and an absence of a new certain candidate. February was a positive month for euro investment grade corporate credit markets with spreads tightening and asset class returning 0.6% over month. Due to increasing inflation pressure our view on fixed income markets is pessimistic. Rise in euro zone base interest rates has moved nearer and that leaves shorter bonds particularly sensitive to news flow.
