Manager Commentary

Swedbank Pension Fund K3 returned 0.6% in February with YTD performance of 0.9%. February showed a strong regional divergence in equity markets. As in January this month didn't offer any better results for the majority of emerging equity markets and these continued to underperform the developed markets' equities. The risk aversion trend was given a new impulse by popular revolts in North Africa (Libya) after the situation had temporarily eased (Egypt). Conjointly price of crude oil has reached record heights. Pacific equity markets fell while Russian market climbed higher buoyed by rising oil price. Within large developed markets best performing was Japanese stock market, followed by US and Europe. Euro strengthened slightly over the month. Flow of economic data for euro zone and US indicated that economic growth is becoming sustainable. Thereby Germany's business climate index (IFO) rose to highest level of its 20-year history. On the other hand inflation is rising at faster pace than expected. Within euro fixed income it was relatively quiet month with German government bonds yield curve little changing. Meanwhile risk premiums of euro periphery bonds (Greece, Ireland, Portugal) continued to rise. Euro zone governments pursued intensive negotiations on dealing with the debt crisis and a new stimulus package should be revealed in next EU leaders summit in March. February was a positive month for corporate credit markets with both investment grade and emerging market bonds finishing month in positive territory. Although we remain optimistic in equity markets in longer perspective we continue with underweight in equities in March. Main short-term risk factors for equities are: (i) central banks policy of tightening liquidity in the fear of increasing inflation pressure (ii) a rapid rise of oil price which deteriorates a global economic growth outlook.
